Rabbit Health Matters

The 2009 RWF Conference

Saturday 28th February 2009
The Village Hotel, Chilwell, Nottingham NG9 6DL

After the success of our previous conference's whereby 2 lecture streams were run concurrently, one for Veterinary Professionals and one for owners/rescue workers, we have decided to implement this again for the 2009 RWF Conference.

Rabbit health information is constantly evolving and there is an abundant of individuals both within the veterinary profession and general public who want to remain at the forefront of this information.

Who is the conference suitable for?

Rabbit owners/rescuers and veterinary professionals need to be aware of different information relating to the medical care of rabbits. Dividing delegates into veterinary and non-veterinary streams ensures the lectures are tailored to the requirements of each group.

This conference is suitable for veterinary surgeons, veterinary nurses, veterinary students, Animal Nursing Assistants, rabbit owners, rescue workers or anyone else involved with or interested in rabbit health. However, to get the best out of the day, non-veterinary professionals will require reasonably extensive rabbit health knowledge.

CPD attendance certificates will be awarded on request.

When and where?

Saturday 28th February 2009 at the Village Hotel, Chilwell, Nottingham, 9.30am - 5pm. Registration commences at 8.30am.

The lectures will take place in 2 separate conference suites, with exhibition stands and catering situated close by.

The hotel is situated approximately 6 miles from the mainline railway station in Nottingham, approximately 10 miles from East Midlands Airport and has easy access from the M1 and all road links.
